

Dear Nesibu Sebhat

I did take time to read your piece. Honestly, at first, when I saw this piece, I thought you were going to tell us the good news of unity of EPRP. Then, when I read that your intention was to show both the enemies and friends alike that there was never been unity, it just hurt me. One thing I am happy is the fact that you were invited to be part of the solution, but you chose to stay away and then hammer down the attempt to unite the party and declared that the EPRP lead by Ato Eyasu Alemayehu is alive and well and functioning on its own independently.

I have a number of questions for you, for clarification. Don't take it as a challenge please. Was Ato Eyasu present at the meetings called for reconciliation? EPRP (D) has already elected fresh faces (although you say that brother Mersha is still pushing from the back), has the EPRP lead by Ato Eyasu done the same thing? You see, if Ato Mersha gave up his leadership and sat at the back, that is OK, because you just don't kick out a veteran from the party he had taken bullets for, can you?

And you, my brother, where do you belong? Are with Ato Eyasu lead EPRP or the EPRP (D)? If you claim to be neither, then are you up to help to bring the two groups together? If you do that, count me as your support, although I barely matter. I will travel to any distance to materialise the effort, if my small contribution is needed. I don't like standing by the side and then raining an avalanche of criticism that does not help at all.

Ethiopia needs both Eyasu and Mersha! The reason is obvious.

God bless Ethiopia
